

Last week during the International Water Association Microbial Ecology and Water Engineering Specialist (MEWE) Conference held in Brisbane, Monita Naicker from Aquatec Maxcon Group and Andy Watson from South Burnett Regional Council hosted a tour of international delegates at the Kingaroy Waste Water Treatment Plant.

Kingaroy WWTP is Australia's First of three Nereda plants, has won several awards and continues to repay Council with its low operating costs and high quality effluent used to irrigate local sporting fields.

Delegates heard from the Council operators about the features of the plant and shared their operating experiences over the last seven years.

Kingaroy WWTP continues to operate successfully and helps the Council to meet its environmental and community expectations. Aquatec Maxcon is proud to be part of this landmark project.
